

Are Bleeding Hemorrhoids a Cause for Worry?

Bleeding hemorrhoids are a sign that the condition has become worse. If you are aware that you have piles and they suddenly start to bleed, you might want to check with your physician because this means that you have ruptured your hemorrhoids. However, blood in your stool can also be a sign of other serious health conditions.

One Way to Check If the Blood in Your Stool is from Bleeding Hemorrhoids is from Its Color

If it is bright red, this could mean that it came from your piles. People have hemorrhoids and they act as padding for the anal sphincter, muscle accountable for moving the stool along. They're filled with blood vessels and they help aid in bar stool movement. These types of blood vessels receive oxygenated blood, for this reason the bright red blood, as opposed to the dark red color of the deoxygenated blood. If the blood in your stool is dark red, it may mean that the bleeding will be coming from further up the anal canal or from other parts of your body.

What People Refer to as Piles are Actually Inflamed Hemorrhoids

The inflammation causes discomfort during bowel movement. However, if there is blood in your stool, this suggests that you may have ruptured your piles. Since fresh blood is pumped to this structure straight from the heart, the flow of blood is much more intense. People can become anemic due the loss of blood.

Is Also Important to Note that There are Two Types- Internal and External

This is mainly classified depending on their location. Internal hemorrhoids can be found additional up into the rectum and you won't be able to see them, unless they enlarge to the point that they stick out the anus. Often, inner ones cannot be felt because they are affected by visceral anxiety, which do not transmit pain. External hemorrhoids tend to be the ones that people usually see and they are much more painful. Both of these can be ruptured and cause bleeding but it is observed more often with internal cases. If you are not aware that you have piles, blood in your stool is a sign that you may have internal piles.

Generally, Piles can Subside Over Time in the Event that the Cause is No Longer Present

Creams can be used to reduce discomfort and reduce inflammation. However, if bleeding occurs, damage has been done to the hemorrhoids. You should check with your physician regarding the severity of the bleeding.

For Mild Cases of Rupture, It can be Treated With Creams and Products

These lotions help heal the shatter and reduce the inflammation. For severe cases, surgery may be the best alternative. The majority of procedures remove the piles simply by cutting it off, or cutting off it's blood supply so it dries up. Even some people who suffer from mild to average bleeding turn to surgery because it is the fastest way to treat the condition. However, the process is actually painful and costly.
